ARRANGEMENTS

FOR THE

FUNERAL CEREMONIES

IN COMMEMORATION OF THE

GENERAL ANDREW JACKSON,

EX-PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

The Joint Special Committee, representing the Common Council of the City of New-York, appointed to devise measures for giving some appropriate expression to the public sentiment, on the occasion of the death of General ANDREW JACKSON, Ex-President of the United States, respectfully

SUBMIT :

That, deeply impressed with the grave and solemn character of the duty assigned them, and conscious that no act of theirs could add honor to the memory of the great and good man, whose death the united voice of the American people deplores, they have aimed, nevertheless, so to perform their part, as to enable their fellow-citizens to unite in a public testimonial, in a form, to some degree commensurate with the occasion.

Could fervent zeal, and an anxious, unswerving purpose have availed your Committee in their wish to carry out the object for which they were appointed, the consummation would not have fallen short, either in form or circumstance, of an expression of the public mind, such as the occasion, and the general sense of bereavement alike warranted and demanded. But higher qualities, and greater abilities were required than your Committee can claim to have evinced, and that any thing has been planned or executed comporting with the dignity of a great City like ours, in association with the imperishable fame of the illustrious dead, is to be ascribed, not so much to the exertions of your Committee, as to the general sympathy entertained, and the cordial cooperation rendered by all classes of our fellow-citizens, especially by the Grand Marshal and his Aids, as well as, by the Authorities, and the inhabitants of the adjacent cities of Brooklyn, Jersey, and Newark.

Craving the indulgence of the Common Council, the Committee respectfully submit the following

REPORT,

That, on their first meeting they were waited upon by a Committee of the Common Council of the City of Brooklyn, consisting of Aldermen Burbank, Bokee, Macomber, Lee, and Campbell, who expressed a desire to unite with the Committee of the Common Council of the City of New-York, on behalf the City of Brooklyn, in devising measures for the contemplated Procession and Ceremonies, to which desire your Committee promptly and cordially assented. They thus, in conjunction with the Committee of the Common Council of the City of Brooklyn, proceeded to take into consideration the object of their appointment, and on the 18th of June, instant, they unanimously adopted the following resolutions, which were ordered to be published in the papers of the day :

Resolved, That the Common Councils of the Cities of New York and Brooklyn will solemnize the death of the late General Andrew Jackson by a Civic and Military Procession, to be composed of the Military and different Societies and Citizens of our respective cities, and that such procession take place on Tuesday next, the 24th instant.

Resolved, That our fellow-citizens generally, and the different Societies, Trades, and Associations, and Fire Departments of our cities and adjoining counties, are requested to unite in this testimony of respect to the illustrious dead ; and all Societies and Associations intending to co-operate, are requested to communicate to the Sub-Committees on or before Friday next, at 3 o'clock, at the Chamber of the Board of Assistant Aldermen, in order to make the necessary arrangements to carry out the views of the Common Councils in an appropriate manner.

Resolved, That the Army and Navy of the United States on this station, are requested to co-operate with us in making the necessary arrangements, and that the Committee on Military be requested to communicate with the Commanders of the different Stations.

Resolved, That no banner bearing political devices, or inscriptions, shall be admitted in the Procession.

It was also Resolved, That, in order to render effective the action of your Committee, the following Special Sub-Committees should be in daily attendance, at the Chamber of the Board of Assistant Aldermen, to receive delegations and communications, and to direct arrangements with regard to the matters specially entrusted to them.

Committee on Military Affairs,

Messrs. Tappan, Bokee, and Purser,

Messrs. Cornell, Burbank, Benson, Purser, and Hart.

Committee on Invitations,

Messrs. Hart, Brady, and Macomber.

Committee to Select the Orator,

Messrs. Purser, Meserole, and Campbell.

Your Committee, through their Special Sub-Committees, were waited upon with great promptness by delegations, and were in immediate receipt of communications from the Military, and the various Civic Associations.

SOCIETY OF TAMMANY, OR COLUMBIAN ORDER.

SPECIAL MEETING.

JUNE 17th, 1845.

The following preamble and resolutions, offered by Sachem Boyd, were unanimously adopted, and ordered to be published:—

Whereas, It has pleased an All-wise Providence to remove from the scene of his earthly triumphs and cares, our fellow-citizen and brother, Gen. ANDREW JACKSON, the man who, after WASHINGTON, had, above all men of his time, most deeply enshrined himself in the hearts of his fellow-citizens ; the HERO to whom the virtue of dauntless bravery was a common quality, compared with the superior generalship that controlled it : the STATESMAN, whose strength of thought was stamped upon his every act, and whose intuitive sense of right made his policy, the policy of the whole people ; the PATRIOT, the sole engrossing thought of whose whole life, was the honor and prosperity of his beloved country—who, by his manly conduct, in time of peace, maintained that honor no less than by his achievements in time of war ; the Christian, to whom the bestowal of the height of all worldly honors ever conferred on man was as nothing compared with his hope and trust in the wisdom and mercy of the GIVER of all good.

And Whereas, As Americans, claiming some share in the renown which the illustrious life of the departed Hero and statesman has shed over our whole country, desirous, so far as it may be in our power, to perpetuate his memory as an example to those around us, and to those who are to follow us, believing that due honors to the mighty dead, are but as incentives to the living, to perform their duties to their fellow men, supporters of the principles of which the renowned deceased stood forth as the civic Hero of the age, and claiming him as a true Brother of our common fraternity, doubly bound to us by the strongest ties : Therefore,

Resolved, That the incidents, the events and results, of the career of ANDREW JACKSON, have made an indelible impression upon the minds of the people of the present, and will influence the action of future generations.

Resolved, That this Society deeply sympathise with his immediate friends, his companions in arms still surviving, and the people en masse, connected with him as they are, by ties of veneration and gratitude for great and lasting public services and benefits.

Resolved, That this Society will join in such public testimony to the memory of the deceased patriot as may be ordered by the municipal authority of this city.

Resolved, That a Committee of seven be appointed to confer with the Committee of the Common Council, and make the arrangements necessary to carry the above resolutions into effect.

Extract from the minutes.

ASBURY W. KIRK, Secretary.

DEMOCRATIC REPUBLICAN GENERAL COMMITTEE.

Tammany Hall, June 19, 1845.

At a Special meeting of this Committee, held pursuant to call, ELIJAH F. PURDY, Esq. in the chair; the Chairman stated that the General Committee had been convened upon this occasion for the purpose of taking some action upon the subject of the mournful intelligence which has spread a gloom, not only over our City, but has struck at the hearts and affections of every Republican Patriot, throughout the length and breadth of our land. He alluded to the Death of GENERAL JACKSON. Although his advanced age and feeble health, said the Chairman, had in some measure prepared us for this sad intelligence, yet we could not but feel that we had sustained a great loss, and one that would make an impression, and would be felt by our whole country for ages to come; but the Patriot, the Sage, the Philosopher, and the Christian, has gone down to the grave, honored, respected, and beloved. The Chairman having concluded his feeling, appropriate, and eloquent remarks, the following preamble and resolutions were submitted, and unanimously approved:

Whereas, The Creator of the world has been pleased to bring to a final close the earthly existence of General ANDREW JACKSON, late President of the United States. Pronounce him one of the first men of the age, and you will not have done him justice. Class him among the mighty men who have adorned and dignified every age and clime from the creation of the world, and where shall we find one who can justly claim to take precedence of the Immortal JACKSON ?

And Whereas, The General Committee, partaking deeply in this national bereavement, and being impressed with the importance which belongs to the fame and career of the illustrious deceased, as a Soldier, a Statesman, and a Patriot—whose life has been devoted to the sacred cause of human liberty, and whose character and unceasing efforts have done more to illustrate the principles and blessings of free government, than any other—feel that they but express the calm, mature judgment of the American people, when they hold him up to mankind as a pure and noble example of human greatness, worthy of the emulation of the rising generation through all time ; therefore,

Resolved, That while we mourn for the loss of this great and good man, whose memory it is patriotism to love, we cannot regard his death in the light of a national calamity ; for, though his body has departed from its earthly stage, his spirit and his counsels still will continue to exercise their beneficial influence over the destinies of his beloved country ; and we are further consoled by the proud privilege of directing upon him the contemplation of a world, as he now stands ranked with the immortal WASHINGTON and JEFFERSON, a spotless specimen of republican purity and virtue.

Resolved, That the death of General ANDREW JACKSON, is an event of deep bereavement to his age and country. It is the descent to the grave of the man, who beyond all others, personified the spirit and progress of the times in which he lived. He has impressed his character upon an era of our history ; and in coming centuries he will stand before the world, as a mighty personification of the spirit of our institutions. His name can never die. We mourn his departure from among us ; but we mourn for ourselves—not for him. The work of his life was complete—his duties to his country perfected—the measure of his glory full ; and in the Christian beauty of his death, after having witnessed in his great career the noblest illustration of a Patriot's life, we have a profound example of how a great man should die.

Resolved, That the members of the General Committee will wear crape on the left arm for forty days, as a tribute of respect to the illustrious deceased.

Resolved, That the General Committee appoint a Committee of five, to meet with the Committee of the Common Council and of the Tammany Society.

The Chair appointed, as such Committee, Messrs. Broderick, Maclay, Anderson, Murphy, and Kellogg.

ELIJAH F. PURDY, Chairman.

ISAAC V. FOWLER, }
OLIVER CHARLICK, } Secretaries.

DEMOCRATIC REPUBLICAN YOUNG MEN'S GENERAL COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Democratic Republican Young Men's General Committee, held at Tammany Hall, on Wednesday evening, the 18th instant, a Committee of five was appointed to draft resolutions, expressive of the sense of this Committee on the afflictive dispensation which has just befallen this nation. Whereupon the following gentlemen were appointed to carry the same into effect :

Benjamin S. Hart,	J. B. Hetherington,
W. B. Aitkin,	N. B. Graham,
J. S. Carpentier.

Whereas, it has pleased the Almighty, in his wisdom, to remove from the scene of his usefulness, and to release from his sufferings, the revered and venerable patriot, ANDREW JACKSON—the warm and ardent friend—the sagacious

Statesman—the affectionate Husband—the mighty Warrior—an apostle of Democracy in its broadest and most illimitable sense, whose precepts and examples afford an incentive to the present generation, as well as to millions yet unborn—the impress of whose mighty mind, not only illumines the present age, but is destined to shed an effulgence on the history of the past—a Sage, whose almost sole engrossing and ennobling thought, even to the latest hour of his existence, was the good of his beloved country, and the acts of whose eventful life now adorn its annals—whose warning voice was never raised in vain, when the liberties of his country were threatened by its enemies—a Man, whose iron will and inflexible integrity and purity of purpose bore him triumphantly through to the last, in consonance with the responsive voices of countless freemen. Therefore, in testimony of the irreparable loss we have sustained in the great national calamity which has befallen us, and, inasmuch as it is fitting to give some sign of the memory of those deeds which redeem his name from the power of the grave, and have stamped upon his history the impress of immortality,

Be it resolved, That this General Committee will join their fellow-citizens in such public demonstration of respect and sorrow, as may be recommended by the Common Council.

Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed to carry the foregoing resolution into effect.

Whereupon the Committee on Resolutions, with the Chairman and Secretaries added, were authorized to act in behalf of this Committee.

Resolved, That the members of the Committee be requested to wear crape on their left arm for thirty days.

SILAS WRIGHT CLUB.

Pursuant to previous notice, the members of this Club met at their rooms, No. 79 Bayard-street, on the evening of the 20th instant, and the following resolutions were offered by the Secretary, and unanimously adopted.

Whereas, It has been officially announced that Ex-President General ANDREW JACKSON has departed this life, and that we regard him as having been one of the purest men, socially and politically—a benefactor of his country, and a firm bulwark of its liberty, through whose noble and disinterested efforts the blessings of independence were preserved and transmitted to us ; therefore.

Resolved, That the death of Andrew Jackson fills our minds with the most poignant sorrow ; and that through his loss a chasm in the hearts of the American people has been made, which it may require centuries to fill.

Resolved, That the whole life of Andrew Jackson presents an unbroken progress of virtue, patriotism and philanthropy ; and that the noble spirit which inspired the youth of 1781, in the bloody struggle of the Revolution, was but the progenitor of that same spirit which accomplished the victory of 1815,—a victory which has so largely contributed to perpetuate freedom on this continent, and to stay the hand of oppression in the other.

Resolved, That whatever may have been the splendor of his victories and military achievements, his demeanor during his retirement from public station far surpasses all other portions of his history ; for here, as surrounded by his family circle and private friends, beamed forth those pure and holy rays of practical benevolence and charity which it had ever been the object of his theories to inculcate ; and, as if excellence itself were to be transcended, the few days just previous to his dissolution exhibit the crowning virtue of his mind ; humility without meanness, and a full reliance upon the wisdom of Providence.

Resolved, That we will unite with our fellow-citizens in paying that honor which is due to the glorious and immortal deceased, on Tuesday next.

Resolved, That the proceedings of this meeting be published, and that we now adjourn.

TENTH WARD.

At a meeting of the Democratic Republican Ward Committee of the Tenth Ward, held at the Dutch House, corner of Broome and Forsyth-streets, on the 20th instant, the following preamble and resolution were unanimously adopted :

Inasmuch as it has pleased a mysterious Providence to remove by death, the venerable Ex-President, General ANDREW JACKSON, who in his youth consecrated his energies in behalf of Republican principles and Free Institutions, and who through an eventful career of nearly fifty years of active public life, exerted his intuitive powers to extend civil liberty, and preserve the rights of his fellow citizens, not only as a HERO on the battle-field, but as a profound Statesman and SAGE, whose sagacity and wisdom have contributed more than any other, to maintain and perpetuate the great and glorions emblems of Democratic Freedom. By this national bereavement, memory brings to mind, in all their glowing characters, "the scenes of other days." Heroism and military achievements which all applauded and admired—stability and firmness in administering the affairs of a great nation which reflected credit, honor, and glory to its institutions—uprightness and integrity of spirit and principle, that indicated virtue, incapable of duplicity—Living he was the people's joy—Dying he is their sorrow.

And Whereas This Committee deeply lament, in common with their fellow-citizens, the sad and irreparable loss occasioned by his death, from the Sages and wise Counselors of our Nation, we most sincerely recommend to the different Associations of the Ward, and the citizens generally, without distinction of party, to prepare on Tuesday next to make such demonstration as shall be commensurate with the loss of so faithful an advocate and supporter of our national institutions and benefactor of human rights.

FUNERAL OF GENERAL JACKSON.

In compliance with the request of the Ward Committee, the citizens of the Ward assembled at Hermitage Hall, on Monday evening, June 23d, to make arrangements for the funeral of Ex-President JACKSON, Jacob Aims, Esq. was appointed President ; Thomas Jeremiah, Esq. Vice President ; J. N. Crain and George A. Corey were appointed Secretaries. The call of the meeting having been read, the President sustained the call in a few most eloquent remarks, illustrating the propriety of paying respect to departed worth. Whereupon, Messrs. Thomas Jeremiah, Geo. H. Ross, J. N. Crain, Joseph C. Pinckney, and Jacob Prout, were appointed a Committee to retire and draft resolutions expressive of the feelings of the meeting. During the absence of the Committee, the meeting was eloquently addressed by James Thompson, Esq. after which the Committee reported the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted :

Whereas, An all-wise Providence has appointed to all men that they shall be removed from their sphere of usefulness by death ; and whereas we, in common with our fellow-citizens, deplore its occurrence in the death of General ANDREW JACKSON, the man who has filled the measure of his country's glory, and who, next to WASHINGTON, was first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen, among the Patriots and Sages of the present time ; therefore

Resolved, That as the Common Councils of New-York and Brooklyn, have made ample arrangements for all classes of our fellow-citizens to join with them in solemnizing the funeral obsequies of that great man, on Tuesday the 24th instant, therefore

Resolved, That the citizens of this Ward, in grateful remembrance of his exalted worth, pure patriotism, distinguished and unsullied services, and his heroic and Christian virtues exhibited at the close of his eventful life, and as a tribute of the profound respect they entertain for his memory, and the deep sorrow they feel at this national bereavement, will join the City Authorities in paying the last tribute of respect to his memory.

Resolved, That we do accept the invitation extended to their fellow-citizens, by the joint action of the Tammany Society and General Committees, and will meet with them at Tammany Hall, to-morrow, at 11 o'clock, A. M. to join in the ceremonies of the day.

Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed to make all necessary arrangements.

The following gentlemen were appointed a Committee of Arrangements :—Henry Keyser, John Pettigrew, George H. Ross, Jacob Prout and Paul Grout.

After which, the meeting then adjourned.

JACOB AIMS, President.

a source of deep regret to this Division, that thereby, they will be deprived of the gratification of uniting with the Infantry of the City of New-York in paying this last tribute of respect to the memory of the illustrious dead.

City of Brooklyn, June 21st, 1845.

DEAR GENERAL,

I received this morning your polite invitation to join the Infantry of the City of New-York, on the occasion of the funeral ceremonies in honor of the lamented General JACKSON. The Common Council of the City of Brooklyn have requested my services in assisting to form the Brooklyn Procession on that occasion—it is not determined what post is to be assigned myself and the small command I shall have out, but if after arriving in New-York we are to be separated from the Brooklyn body, I shall most cheerfully comply with your wishes.

With great respect, I have the honor of remaining your obedient servant,

Major-General 2d Division of N. Y. S. I.

To Major-General GARRIT H. STRIKER,

The Special Sub-Committee, to select an Orator, addressed, to the Hon. MARTIN VAN BUREN, a letter of invitation to deliver an Oration on the occasion of the contemplated ceremonies—to which the following reply was received :

Lindenwald, June 20th, 1845.

GENTLEMEN,

I have this moment received your letter inviting me, in behalf of the Common Councils of New-York and Brooklyn, to deliver, on the 24th instant, an appropriate eulogy upon the life and character of the lamented JACKSON.

It is not necessary to say how deeply I sympathise in the feelings by which the authorities of the two Cities are actuated, or how earnestly I approve the solemn testimonials of respect by which they propose to do honor to the memory of one who was at his death justly regarded by his countrymen as their most distinguished citizen.

No one has probably had better opportunities than myself for observing those traits of character which secured to the illustrious deceased the pre-eminence which he acquired among his fellow-citizens, nor is there among the millions, who deplore his loss, a single one by whom his memory will be more reverently or enduringly cherished. It will be among the favored objects of my future life to do all in my power to impress those, who have not been equally fortunate in their opportunities for judging the deceased from personal observation, with just opinions of his character ; and with this view it is my intention to preface, at a proper time, a suitable memoir of his conduct and principles as the result of the long and close intercourse, personal and official, which existed between us.

Under these circumstances I prefer that the privilege which has been so kindly conferred upon me should be ex-tendered to one of the great number of capable and patriotic friends of the deceased, by whom you are surrounded, and who would, I am quite sure, be most happy to embrace it.

Do me the favor, Gentlemen, to assure those you represent, that I entertain a proper sense of the high honor which their selection confers upon me, and accept for yourselves assurances of the respect and esteem with which I am,

Your friend and obedient servant,

MARTIN VAN BUREN.

Upon the receipt of the foregoing letter of declination, the Committee waited upon the Honorable Benjamin F. Butler, and requested him to deliver an Oration on the occasion of the approaching solemnities—to which request, notwithstanding the brief period of time remaining for preparation, Mr. Butler answered in the following communication :

New-York, June 21st, 1845.

DEAR SIR :

I have received your note of this day, inviting me to deliver a Funeral Oration in honor of the memory of ANDREW JACKSON.

However I may regret, on many accounts, the very short time allowed for preparation, I cannot decline the service of honor and labor of love to which you have called me.

I am, Sir, very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,

The Special Sub-Committee on Invitations, addressed to various eminent and distinguished individuals letters of invitation to participate in the Funeral Ceremonies, of which letters, the following is a copy :

New-York, June 18th, 1845.

The distinguished virtues, the indomitable energy, and the memorable services to the Country, in Camp and Cabinet, which have characterized the life of the illustrious deceased, and endeared him to the hearts of his countrymen, have induced our Municipal Authorities to regard his death as an occasion which calls for a public testimonial of affection and reverence for his memory. It has been accordingly determined that obsequies, corresponding with his character, shall be observed in this City, on the 24th day of June, instant, at which time your co-operation will be regarded by our citizens, and by the Common Council, with sentiments of the greatest respect.

In behalf of the Committee,
 We have the honor to be,

GENTLEMEN—

The Invitation, from you to the Mayor and Common Council of this City, to join in paying proper respect to the memory of ANDREW JACKSON, on the 24th instant, was duly accepted, last evening, and Aldermen Fryatt, Bramhall, and Wakeman, were appointed a Committee to confer with you, &c.

Washington, 22d June, 1845.

GENTLEMEN,

I have been honored by the receipt of your kind invitation to unite with the Common Council of the City of New-York, on Tuesday next, in the tribute of respect which they intend to pay to the Memory of GENERAL JACKSON. Most gladly should I accept this invitation, if it were in my power. Unfortunately, however, at the present moment, my public engagements are of such a character, that I cannot leave this City.

Ostentation is banished, in the national grief for GENERAL JACKSON. This is deep as the fountains of the heart. He loved his countrymen with an intense ardor, and loved them always; and they mourn his loss with the grateful affection of children. He was beyond question the first among his countrymen, and a Purer Patriot, a more Honest Man, never existed. Even in death, his example will prove a blessing to his country; for truly, he died the death of the Christian, and his end was peace.

Again I say :—most gladly would I accept your invitation, if this were possible.

Yours, very respectfully,

JAMES BUCHANAN.

I have received your invitation as a Committee on behalf of the Common Council of the City of New-York, to join with them on the 24th instant, in testifying their high respect for the memory of ANDREW JACKSON.

As a Statesman, a Patriot, a Soldier, and a Christian, he has left no superior among the living, and but one only among the dead.

I should certainly proceed to New-York to unite with you on this mournful occasion, but my public duties forbid my absence at this period.

Baltimore, June 23, 1845.

GENTLEMEN,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, inviting me to join with the Common Council of the of New-York, in testifying by appropriate ceremonies, the respect due to the memory of GENERAL JACKSON.

My engagements in similar duties here, put it out of my power to accept your kind invitation. Otherwise it would have given me pleasure; a melancholy one indeed,—to meet on such an occasion some of my valued friends of your State, with whom it was my good fortune to be intimately associated during an eventful period of GENERAL JACKSON'S Administration ; and with them to recall the many scenes through which we passed together, when gathered around the Patriotic Chief,—and the proofs they constantly afforded of his commanding genius, his Devotion to his Country, and of his Pure and Spotless Integrity. The whole civilized world already know how bountifully he was endowed by Providence with those high gifts which qualified him to lead, both as a Soldier and a Statesman. But those only who were around him in times of anxious deliberation when great and mighty interests were at stake ; and who were with him also in the retired scenes of domestic life, in the midst of his family and friends, can fully appreciate, his innate love of justice, his hatred of oppression in every shape it would assume, his magnanimity, his entire freedom from any feeling of personal hostility to his political opponents, and his constant and unvarying kindness and gentleness to his friends. We may well pay national honors to his memory, for his name will ever be one of the brightest ornaments of this Republic.

I am, Gentlemen,

With great respect,

Your obedient servant,

GENTLEMEN,

Your invitation to me to unite with the Common Council of the City of New-York on Tuesday next, in paying a proper tribute of respect to the memory of General ANDREW JACKSON, reached me this morning. The Secretary of State, Comptroller, and Attorney General were alike honored by you, and they are, I believe, the only State officers at present in the City. I prepare to comply with your invitation, and I am authorised by the officers above named to inform you that they also intend to unite with the Common Council, upon this occasion.

Will you do me the favor to communicate to the Common Council, the profound thanks of myself and the gentlemen of whom I have spoken, for its patriotic resolution, to do honor to the memory of one, who, as a Soldier, a Statesman, and a Citizen, has conferred so much honor upon his country, and so well deserves to be honored by his fellow-citizens. Our respectful acknowledgements are due to the Common Council for the invitation you have communicated to us, to participate in the Ceremonies of an occasion so full of interest. For the kind manner in which you, Gentlemen, have made this communication to us, you have our thanks.

Our public duties do not allow us to leave earlier than the Monday Evening boat, and I write by this mail to bespeak quarters at the City Hotel, where we propose to stay during our continuance in the City.

With great respect,

I am, Gentlemen,

I regret exceedingly that the Governor is not here to acknowledge this mark of respect and kindness extended to him by the City Authorities of a Sister State. I know he will appreciate it highly, and were it possible for him to be with you in doing honor to the memory of one to whom he was sincerely attached, and in aiding to demonstrate the Nation's gratitude for the pre-eminent virtues and public services of the deceased, I feel confident he would not forego the mournful pleasures of the occasion.

Up to the present hour, the professors and officers, associated with me, have not been enabled to complete the duties connected with the examination of the Corps of Cadets and the candidates for admission. The whole of the first class of Cadets have received their Diplomas and left here, and the third class is also absent on furlough,

It becomes therefore out of my power to unite with the authorities of the city, in the ceremonies testifying respect for the memory of General ANDREW JACKSON, and I regret that such is the case, as no one has done more to raise the Military character of the Army of the United States, than he whose Memory calls forth the obsequies ordered by the authorities of my native city.

Altho' out of the power of myself, and those under my command to attend, in a body, your invitation shall be communicated to such individuals of the Academic staff of the Institution as still remain here, and are not on duties that must be continued to preserve the discipline of the institution, that they may have it in their power to attend individually.

The Funeral Urn was placed on a bier in front of the Hall and received the honors of the Corps on the march. When the First Division had passed, the Urn was borne to its position in the Second Division and placed upon the Car. This was covered with black broadcloth, and drawn by four White Horses, which were led by four blacks dressed in appropriate costume. # PRAYER.

The following are the Prayer of the Rev. Dr. KREBS, the Oration of the Hon. BENJAMIN F. BUTLER, and the Requiem of the New-York Sacred Music Society, which are referred to in the foregoing report of the Grand Marshal.

THE PRAYER.

ALMIGHTY GOD, Thou art the King of Nations: who should not fear Thee? In Thee we live, and move, and have our being.

We desire to thank Thee for all Thy mercy to us, and to the children of men. We bless Thy name for what thou hast done for us, and for our fathers, and for all that we are permitted to hope from Thy kind providence for the time to come. The lines have fallen to us in pleasant places; yea, we have a goodly heritage. Thou hast given us free institutions; peace and plenty within our borders, and statutes and ordinances, under whose influence, patriotism, virtue, liberty, and religion have flourished. The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad.

We acknowledge Thy great goodness in raising up for us from time to time, those who have led our armies in battle, counselled for us in cabinets, and framed and administered our laws—for by Thee, Kings reign, and Princes decree justice. And we would especially acknowledge Thee, while we this day recognise the hand of God, who giveth and who taketh away, in the death of him in whose honor these obsequies are rendered.—Successful as a Soldier, distinguished as a Ruler, and eminent as a citizen, it was the Lord who gave him those endowments which he sought to expend for the service and honor of his country. And we thank the Lord—the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, that after the fulfilment of his public career, he was permitted to retire to the peaceful shades of domestic life, where, in the lingering years of his remaining earthly pilgrimage, he was solaced with the hopes of religion, bearing testimony to the excellency and truth of divine revelation, and finally departing this life, supported by the consolations of the Christian faith, and in the communion of the Church of God.

We are admonished that the mighty fall and the princes of the people perish, for their breath is in their nostrils.—Still, therefore, O Lord, would we trust in Thee, who hast everlasting strength. Bless Thou our country. Raise up and qualify those who shall preside over our counsels and administer our affairs. May Thy favor rest on Thy servant, the President of the United States, on our Legislators and on our Judges. Under wise and equitable laws, may truth, virtue, and piety be promoted; and thus may we lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all godliness and honesty.—May all the people praise Thee, and be subject unto Thy statutes, who art the King Eternal, Immortal, and Invisible, the only wise God. And may we, with our rulers and our people, be ever protected by Thine Arm, and nourished with thy grace—that at last, we may come to the enjoyment of that inheritance, which is incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, which is reserved in heaven for them that are kept by the faith of Jesus Christ unto salvation. And now unto Him who is able to do for us exceeding abundantly above all that we ask, or think—even unto God, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, be glory for ever and ever—Amen.

Mournful but pleasant, friends and fellow-citizens, is the service in which we are engaged. ANDREW JACKSON, upon whose bed of sickness and suffering, have been so intently fixed the filial and solicitous regards of the millions of America, is no more. His great soul has ascended to its author; his venerable form has sunk into the grave. To that grave, with swelling hearts and tearful eyes, and sad funereal rites, a Nation is repairing. We have come to it to-day. While we linger within its sacred precincts, the praises of the Hero we revered, the Magistrate we honored, and the Man we loved, rise instinctively to our lips. To their free utterance nature prompts, duty enjoins, affection compels us. It is fitting, it is right, that such tributes should be paid to those who, in council or in camp, have advanced the glory of their country, and the welfare of their kind. The homage thus bestowed is at least disinterested; for the dead who are its objects, insensible alike to praise and to blame, can make no return to the living who proffer it. It exerts a humanizing influence on the universal heart; it promotes the formation of a true national character; it softens the asperities of party; it incites to a virtuous emulation. Next, in purity and meetness, to the thanksgivings which we owe to the God who gave, and guided, and sustained them, is the feeling of grateful reverence we should ever cherish towards those who are the instruments of His goodness. To the claims of our great men, of every age and time, of every sect and party, let us then be faithful. Let History transmit to other generations the story of their lives ; let the canvas and the marble perpetuate the image of their forms ; let poetry and music breathe forth their names in hymns and harmonies ; let the united voice of their countrymen echo their praises to the remotest shores—so that wherever an American footstep shall tread, or a lover of American liberty be found, there, too, the memory of their greatness shall abide—a beauty and an excellence—the joy of all the earth !

The facts and incidents which belong to the romantic and eventful life of Andrew Jackson, are too numerous to allow me, on the present occasion, to attempt an extended biographical sketch. After a brief notice of his early life, I shall, therefore, confine myself to a general view of such portions of his more active career, as seem to me best calculated to illustrate the prominent features of his character, and his more important services to his country.

He was the son of respectable parents, belonging to the most hardy, virtuous and useful of all orders of society—the great middle class. His parents, as is well-known, were natives of Ireland, though some of their ancestors were originally from Scotland. They emigrated to South Carolina in 1765. He was born at the Waxhaw settlement in that State, on the 15th of March, 1767 ; he died on Sunday, the 8th of the present month, having been spared to the good old age of more than seventy-eight years, retaining to the last, in a remarkable degree, his extraordinary intellectual powers his ardent affections, and his deep interest in the happiness of his friends and the welfare of his country.

The peculiarities of his character are in harmony with his extraction. The martyr blood of Scotland blended with that of the Emerald Isle, and modified by the residence of his ancestors in her genial clime, coursed in his veins; and no man, probably, ever lived, who united in a higher degree, the firmness and perseverance of the one race with the quick and generous temperament of the other.

Deprived, soon after his birth, of his father; his eldest brother slain during the war of the revolution by British troops; himself compelled by the approach of the enemy, to abandon, at the age of fourteen, the Academy at which he had been placed; freely offering himself with his sole surviving brother, to the military service of his country; both soon after captured by the enemy; both assaulted and wounded because scorning to submit to personal indignity; the other of the two brothers dying of the wound thus received; his mother, soon after, pressed by fatigue and grief into an untimely grave; was ever an ardent and susceptible youth placed in circumstances more likely to make a deep and lasting impression on his character! "The child," (to use the words of a great Poet of our own times) "the child is father of the man." And when we consider the baptism of blood by which ANDREW JACKSON, in the spring time of his youth, was dedicated to the service of his country, can we wonder at the undying faithfulness, or the burning zeal, with which, from youth to age, he presented himself a living sacrifice at her altar?

Passing over the intermediate space, we find him at the age of twenty-one, established in the practice of the law, in what was then one of the back settlements of North Carolina. It was a region of restless activity, of stirring interest, of wild adventure. The scanty population, thinly scattered over an extensive territory, was constantly exposed to the inroads of powerful tribes of Indians still the occupants of its primeval forests. They had been subjugated, during the war of the Revolution, by the American arms, but were ever ready, when occasion tempted, to surprise the incautious traveller, and to cut off the unprotected family. In the border conflicts which grew out of this condition of the territory, JACKSON renewed the instructions in drill and muster which he received in boyhood, and added to them lessons in the warfare of the Indians, both destined to be afterwards employed on a wider theatre and for infinitely greater ends.

Intestine feuds also distracted the inhabitants; many of their numbers were rude in manners, and some of them reckless in character; the collection of debts, by force of law, was a task of difficulty and danger, and the lawyer who undertook it, needed activity of body as well as of intellect, firmness of nerve as well as of purpose, vigor of arm as well as of understanding. JACKSON bringing with him an unsullied reputation, was immediately employed in cases of this sort, and he entered on the discharge of his professional duties with the same promptitude and energy, so often displayed by him in matters of higher and more extended interest. In these, and other professional efforts of the like nature, he is beset by opposition, and embroiled in collisions, which might have proved fatal to one less honest and courageous; but his manly bearing and his inflexible pursuit of justice, in despite of every impediment, establish his reputation; and professional success is the necessary consequence. Another result is, that he becomes universally known as one of the first citizens, in point of character and influence, of the young community, now rapidly increasing in numbers and about to be organized, with the consent and by the cession of North Carolina, as a Territory of the United States.

This event takes place in 1790, and ANDREW JACKSON receives from GEORGE WASHINGTON, then President of the United States, his first appointment to office, that of Attorney of the United States for the new Territory. In the short space of six years, the Territorial Government is superseded by the admission into the Union of the State of Tennessee. JACKSON is a member of the Convention which forms the Constitution, and he takes an active part in the preparation of that instrument. It contains some peculiar provisions which deserve a moments notice. The members of the Legislature are chosen for two years, and meet only biennially, except when called together on extraordinary occasions. This arrangement is founded on the idea, that while annual meetings of the legislative body are indispensable, in countries having an hereditary Executive, to the preservation of public liberty, the like necessity does not exist where the Executive is chosen by, and responsible to, the people; and that the people themselves are the best conservators of their rights. The bill of rights in this Constitution is one of the most liberal and comprehensive adopted by any of our States. It asserts, in the strongest terms, the inherent and uncontrollable sovereignty of the people, and their right to instruct as well as to petition their representatives; it denounces perpetuities and monopolies as contrary to the genius of a free State: and it forbids the grant of any hereditary emoluments, privileges or honors. From the subsequent life of JACKSON, it is easy to see that he must have assented, with a warm heart, to all these provisions.

Immediately on the admission of the new State into the Union, JACKSON is chosen one of her delegates in the House of Representatives; and the next year he is appointed one of her Senators in Congress. He serves in this distinguished body, over which THOMAS JEFFERSON was then the presiding officer, until 1799, and thus enjoys opportunities of forming a personal friendship with a statesman and political philosopher, with whose sentiments his own entirely concur, and for whose genius he cherishes the highest admiration. In 1799 he retires by voluntary resignation from this honorable post. Most unexpectedly to himself, he is immediately appointed a Judge of the Supreme Court of his State, a station which he accepts with reluctance, and from which he withdraws at an early day. He does so with the design, which he then supposes he may be permitted to accomplish, of spending the rest of his days in the quiet retreat of a country life. Little does he dream of the brilliant destiny that awaits him. In the meantime, as another preparation for that destiny, the field-officers of one of the divisions of the Tennessee militia, no strangers to his lofty patriotism, or his martial spirit, had chosen him without consultation with, or notice to him, their Major General. This commission he retained until 1814, when he received the like appointment in the army of the United States.

We are now to contemplate ANDREW JACKSON in the new and conspicuous theatre, in which he attracted the regards not only of America, but of the world. Rallying to his standard, at the first moment when the action of the government enabled him to do so, the gallant spirits of his division, he dedicates their persons and his own to the service of the nation. From November 1812 to the cessation of hostilities, he is constantly employed in creating and leading the armies, fighting the battles, and vanquishing the enemies, of his country. It is not my purpose to enter into the details of his military exploits. Of all and of each it may be said, that in each and in all he acquitted himself as no other man but ANDREW JACKSON could have done. With his first touch of the marshal's truncheon, the hand of one born to command at will the energies of his troops, to infuse into them his own daring spirit, and successfully to cope in any and every field with the most skilful and courageous of his enemies, is evidently seen. Throughout his whole military career he exhibits, in felicitous combination, all the qualities of a great commander——comprehensiveness and accuracy of view, genius to devise, skill and courage to execute, coolness and decision in every emergency, perfect command of his resources, sagacity to discover and ability to defeat the plans of his antagonist.

In his campaigns against the Creeks, so formidable by their numbers, their obstinate bravery, and their proficiency in all the arts of savage warfare, he adds to the hardihood, the patience and the self-denial of a Hannibal—the vigor, the celerity, the success of a Cæsar.

When he plants upon his own responsibility, the American Eagle on the forts of Pensacola, statesmen see that the instincts of a heart and will devoted to the public weal, can anticipate the rules of public law; and the nation recognise and honor the clearness of his judgment not less than the promptitude and energy of his conduct.

In his command at New-Orleans, from his arrival at the beleaguered city until his departure from it, we seem to follow some heaven-appointed and heaven-assisted warrior of the ancient dispensation, rather than a chieftain of modern times. Such superhuman activity; such assumption and exercise of power; such chivalrous daring and consummate address in striking the first blow in the unequal conflict; such cautious preparations for the final struggle; such perfect success in its triumphant issue; such frightful havoc in the troops of the enemy; and such almost miraculous preservation of his own; who, in these things, does not see the hand of God, the agency of an instrument ordained, prepared, and guided by Himself?

I must content myself with the briefest possible reference to the war with the Seminoles, in 1817—18. If the exploits of JACKSON in this campaign, had constituted his whole title to military renown, they would have been amply sufficient to place him high on the roll of fame. How does it enhance the estimate of his former achievements, when it is considered that the Seminole war is scarcely thought of in the comparison ; and that JACKSON is seldom named in connexion with it, except by those who refer to it for the purpose of denouncing him for the execution of Ambrister and Arbuthnot ? Having named this incident, I feel it right to state my entire conviction, that in this, as in every other act of his public life, he proceeded under a deep sense of what he believed to be the injunction of duty ; and the sense of duty was ever to him as the voice of Heaven. “ My God would not have smiled on me,” (was his characteristic remark when speaking of this affair to him who addresses you), “ had I punished only the poor ignorant savages, and spared the white men who set them on.”

The hour has at length come, when JACKSON believes he may, a second time, retire to rural occupations, without danger of any further call to engage in the service of the Union. The nation is at peace with all the world ; the Indian tribes have been reduced to submission ; peace reigns in all our borders, and tranquillity throughout the land. He resigns his commission in the army ; refuses the appointment of Minister to Mexico, conferred on him by President Monroe, not only because he desires no office of emolument or honor, but because he will not countenance, by his presence at the Court of ITURBIDE, the substitution of a monarchy in place of a republic, nor the means by which it has been effected.

Other reasons concur to enforce the step he has taken. Incessant toil in the various duties of his command and exposure to the hardships of military service in the warm climates of the South have undermined his constitution ; and retirement seems as needful to the preservation of his own life, as it is to the happiness of those who have so long been denied the pleasure of his society. He does not deem it inconsistent with this feeling, to accept the office of Senator in Congress, again conferred on him by his beloved Tennessee ; for this honorable and comparatively easy service will still leave him, the greater portion of the year, an inmate of the Hermitage.

But his mission is not yet ended.

“ Peace hath her victories,
No less renowned than War.”

And many such victories he is yet to win. By spontaneous uprisings of the people, in his own and other States, he is presented to the nation as a candidate for the highest trust. Gratitude for unequalled services to his country, admiration of the great points of his strongly marked character, implicit confidence in his honesty and patriotism, and an instinctive belief, in the masses, that he who had so triumphantly grappled with the greatest difficulties in time of war, could not but succeed in civil rule, bring to him numerous and enthusiastic supporters in every quarter of the Union. Though he has not a majority of all the votes, his three competitors, each long and honorably identified with the civic services of the Union, are left behind him in the race. In due time another contest ensues. He is raised to the Chief Magistracy by more than two to one of the electoral votes.

In surveying, from this high eminence, the field of duty to which he has been called, he perceives that with many foreign States we have unsettled subjects of dispute, growing out of claims to justice long deferred, for spoliations of our commerce, during that reign of lawless violence, which, in the beginning of this century, disgraced and barbarized the maritime wars of Europe. He sees that unless speedily adjusted, they will expose us to the alternative either of sacrificing our national honor or of vindicating by the sword our unquestionable rights. He resolves that this state of things shall not continue ; that no needless delay, no evasive subterfuge shall be allowed ; that he will proceed, with all possible despatch, in the prosecution of his duty, “ asking nothing that is not right, and submitting to nothing that is wrong ;” and he believes that if this course be steadily and wisely pursued, Peace will be preserved and Justice be obtained.

The result shows the sagacity of his conclusions. One after another, treaties are made and ratified, by which these subjects of irritation, so grave and so dangerous, are all, at length, happily disposed of. In one case only is there any serious delay in the execution of these treaties ; but this is the most important of them all ; for it is our ancient ally, the beautiful, the brilliant FRANCE of our own La Fayette, that neglects the performance of her plighted duty. JACKSON does not hesitate or waver in his course. He deals with the greatest and most honored as he would have dealt with the weakest and most humble ; he sees to it, that while the respectful courtesies due to so distinguished a delinquent, are sedulously observed, no jot or tittle of the national honor is lost or compromised. In the end justice is secured ; the faith of treaties vindicated ; the peace of Empires preserved; and France herself, on a fuller understanding of his course, does honor, with characteristic chivalry and grace, to the “tete de fer”—the iron will of the stern old man.

“ His name through Europe rings,
 Filling each mouth with envy or with praise,
 And all her jealous monarchs with amaze,
 And rumors loud that daunt remotest kings;”

and by his energy and renown our national character is raised to a height of glory never before attained by the American Republic.

In the meantime, JACKSON has been involved, at home, in conflicts protracted and severe. Fired with the love of Democratic Liberty, and filled with zeal for the Federal Constitution, he pursues systems of policy, and adopts a course of measures, which bring on violent collisions with the interests, passions, and prejudices of men in different quarters of the Union. In the midst of the outbreaks of party, produced by these collisions, he is re-elected by a vote of three to one over all the other candidates, although the State of his nativity, formerly foremost in his support, withholds her approving voice. Opposition to him is followed, on her part, by resistance to the laws; the integrity of the Union is threatened; and the nation is exposed to the dangers of a civil war. Now it is that ANDREW JACKSON, superior to the danger and equal to the remedy it requires, by his fidelity, his firmness and his wisdom, achieves the most splendid and most enduring of his victories; averting from his country the stain and curse of fraternal blood ; and giving to his memorable pledge, “ OUR FEDERAL UNION, IT MUST BE PRESERVED,” the strength of a fixed resolve, and the majesty of a perpetual truth.

While the plaudits which now rise from every quarter of the Union are yet sounding in his ears ; when by mere inaction in respect to other sources of political convulsion, he could have secured for the remainder of his official term, a larger degree of personal repose and general approbation, than was ever enjoyed by any of his predecessors ; he is again compelled, as he believes, to a clear and inexorable duty, whose execution he well knows will revive anew the animosities of party ; involve in painful and bitter conflict the remnant of his public life ; and bring upon himself, perhaps, the censure of many whom he loves, and with whose good opinion he would not lightly part. Inferior minds would have shrunk from this new trial. So did not JACKSON. What efforts were made to drive him from his purpose ; with what inflexible resolution he adhered to his position ; and how the people sustained him in this conflict also : is it not written in the history of the times, and fresh in the recollections of all who hear me ?

In reference to this, as well as to every other debateable portion of his public life, I purposely refrain, lest I should transgress the just bounds of this occasion, from any attempt to vindicate their expediency or their rightfulness. Only one claim in his behalf do I now think it needful or becoming to assert ; that if in any of his official acts he erred, his errors were of the understanding, not the heart; and that in them all, he acted from honest, disinterested, and patriotic motives. On this point he thus speaks, in the lofty tone of conscious integrity, in one of his recorded vindications:—

“ In vain do I bear upon my person, enduring memorials of that contest in which American liberty was purchased—in vain have I since periled property, fame and life, in defence of the rights and privileges so dearly bought, * * * if any serious doubts can be entertained as to the purity of my purposes and motives. * * * In the history of conquerors and usurpers, never, in the fire of youth, nor in the vigor of manhood, could I find an attraction to lure me from the path of duty; and now, I shall scarcely find an inducement to commence their career of ambition, when grey hairs and a decaying frame, instead of inviting to toil and battle, call me to the contemplation of other worlds, where conquerors cease to be honored and usurpers expiate their crimes. The only ambition I can feel, is to acquit myself to Him to whom I must soon render an account of my stewardship, to serve my fellow-men, and live respected and honored in the history of my country. No: the ambition which leads me on, is an anxious desire and a fixed determination to return to the people unimpaired the sacred trust they have confided to my charge, * * * to persuade my countrymen, so far as I may, that it is not in a splendid government, supported by powerful monopolies and aristocratical establishments, that they will find happiness, or their liberties protection; but in a plain system, void of pomp—protecting all, and granting favors to none—dispensing its blessings, like the dews of Heaven, unseen and unfelt, save in the freshness and beauty they contribute to produce. It is such a government that the genius of our people requires—such an one only under which our States may remain, for ages to come, united, prosperous, and free. If the Almighty Being, who has hitherto sustained and protected me, will but vouchsafe to make my feeble powers instrumental to such a result, I shall anticipate, with pleasure, the place to be assigned me in the history of my country, and die contented, with the belief that I have contributed, in some small degree, to increase the value and prolong the duration of American liberty.”

Now that he lies in his grave, who will deny to him the justice that he claims ?

ANDREW JACKSON has now retired to the sequestered shades of private life, with the benedictions of a grateful people and the respect and admiration of the world. He enters his loved and peaceful Hermitage at the appointed limit of human existence, with an enfeebled frame, the victim of complicated and incurable maladies, which leave him little respite from pain, and no strength or leisure for the pleasures of active life. Yet has this been in many respects, the happiest, and not the least useful portion of his mortal career.

Feeling that he has fulfilled with fidelity and zeal, the course of public service to which Providence had called him ; conscious of the singleness and purity of his motives, and happy in the belief, that the great mass of his political opponents do him justice in this respect; thrice happy in the knowledge, that the principles by which he has been guided, are warmly cherished by a great majority of the people; receiving continually, and in a thousand forms, proofs of affection and esteem from all classes of his countrymen; full of faith in the vitality and perpetuity of our systems of government, state and federal; anticipating, with delight, the advancing glories of his country; and surrounded by a family he loves, and by each member of which he is held in the profoundest veneration; the retirement of JACKSON, notwithstanding his bodily infirmities, is all that wisdom or patriotism can desire, and such as few statesmen and heroes in the history of mankind are permitted to enjoy.

For more than eight years he is spared to our affections; and though for the last three of them he seldom quits his dwelling, except to bow in the house of God, his mental faculties remain unimpaired; nor are they idle for a day. His correspondence, whether of friendship or of private or public business, is kept up with steadiness and activity. Alive to every thing that concerns his beloved country, and taking daily note of her affairs, he sounds from his lone watch tower the voice of counsel or of warning, according to the vision which he sees, and to the message which has been given him. And though at times a dull ear is turned to his prophesyings, yet in most cases, and especially in the latest, his words have been clothed with their ancient power over the minds and the actions of his fellows. If there be any to whom these utterances seem futile or needless, they will yet allow that each of them breathes the language of the heart, and is instinct with zeal for the happiness and glory of America.

But it is not to the public cause that all his thoughts are given. Weighty and instant as are the duties of the citizen to his country, JACKSON remembers that he owes to his Maker a higher and more solemn responsibility. This sentiment had been implanted in his youthful breast by a mother's lessons and a mother's love. It had been nourished by the example of a wife, one of the excellent of the earth,—by providential deliverances and favors, by the perusals of the Book of God, and by the instructions of the pulpit. Under the circumstances in which he is now placed these influences acquire new, and, by the Divine blessing, decisive force. They lead him to the Garden and the Cross; he seeks and he obtains the forgiveness of his sins; he avows before the world the hopes he has received, and publicly enlists in the army of the faithful. Henceforward he addicts himself, with a child-like docility, to the duties and privileges of the Christian life. He finds in them his chief enjoyment, and they produce in him their appropriate effects—peace with God, fortitude in suffering, patience and resignation in the midst of pain, serenity and hope in the prospect of his departure. And when at length the final hour has come, how does it illustrate the humility of his character, the warmth of his benevolence, the sincerity, the vigor of his faith? In charity towards all men; with prayers for his household, his friends, his country; with words of instruction and of love to all around him; with entire reliance on the merits of his Redeemer; he commits, without a murmur or a sigh, his immortal spirit to the God of his salvation, his perishing body to the dust from which it came !

Such, fellow-citizens, were the last moments of ANDREW JACKSON. How unlike those usually assigned by Poetry and Romance to their fabled heroes ! And yet, in the sober judgment of enlightened reason, not less sublime and heroic than if passed on the field of battle and in the chariot of victory. The greatest of all triumphs is that which is achieved over the last enemy ; and this, through the faith that is in Jesus, he was enabled to achieve. The fires of the last day shall consume the laurel wreaths of earth ; most of them, indeed, will have withered ere it comes ; and all ever worn or won, in the tide of time, would furnish no compensation for the loss of a single soul. But the chaplet awarded to the faithful soldier of the cross, shall be a crown of glory, " that fadeth not away." How poor, in comparison, the death-scenes enacted by the most illustrious warriors of the heathen world ! JACKSON was a Christian, and he died a Christian's death. In view of this fact and of its blessed issues, how rich, how unfailling, our sources of consolation !

In notes, as melodious and sublime as those which wafted to the skies, by the aid of Milton's immortal genius, the departing spirit of the Hebrew Martyr, the chorus of American sympathy sends up from our JACKSON's bed of death, the psalm of mournful exultation :

“ Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail,
Or knock the breast ; no weakness, no contempt,
Dispraise or blame ; nothing but well and fair,
And what may quiet us in a death so noble.”

The Valley of the Mississippi, the theatre of his youthful valor and of his meridian renown—the sanctuary of his declining age—folds within her bosom the ashes of her Hero. In the centre of that young and vigorous State, whose destinies, once his anxious care, were long the objects of his satisfied regard; on the sunny banks of the Cumberland, where the strong verdure of the West begins reluctantly to yield to the luxuriant beauty of the South; embosomed in a sacred solitude, stands the tomb of the Hermitage, henceforth to divide with Mount Vernon, the respect, the admiration, and the reverence of mankind. The simplicity of his life, the calm dignity of his death, are exemplified by the humility of his grave.

You remember how he rejected the imperial honor that was proffered to his bones—“I cannot permit my remains to be the first in these United States to be deposited in a sarcophagus made for an emperor or king. I have prepared a humble depository for my mortal body beside that wherein lies my beloved wife, where, without any pomp or parade, I have requested, when my God calls me to sleep with my fathers, to be laid; for both of us there to remain until the last trumpet sounds to call the dead to judgment, when we, I hope, shall rise together, clothed with that heavenly body promised to all who believe in our glorious Redeemer, who died for us that we might live, and by whose atonement I hope for a blessed immortality.”

This was the answer of Christian meekness, of Republican simplicity, of American Patriotism. Catching the strain from the lips of the dying Hero, we may echo its lofty inspiration. More than this, we may give to it to-day a new and sublimer significance. Sleep sweetly, aged Soldier, Statesman, Sage, in the grave of kindred and affection. It matters little where his body is laid, whose memory is enshrined in all our hearts; the monument of whose fame is the Country that he served; the inscription of whose greatness are the praises of the World. But if there be any solace in memory; if any virtue in the contemplation of heroic deeds; any purity in the lessons of sublime example; to the sepulchre of JACKSON let the pilgrimage of Humanity be made—in the ardor of a generous enthusiasm; the sympathy of a fraternal love; the consolation of a Christian Faith.

THE REQUIEM,

FROM MENDELSSOHN'S ORATORIO OF ST. PAUL.

“ Happy, yea, blessed and happy are they who have endured, for 'though the body sleeps the soul shall live for ever.”

Hereunto annexed are extracts from the minutes of the Common Council of the City of New-York, and of the City of Brooklyn, in relation to the funeral solemnities :

The following Message was received from his Honor the Mayor, communicating the demise of General Andrew Jackson, Ex-President of the United States, viz :

MAYOR'S OFFICE, June 16, 1845.

*To the Honorable
the Common Council :*

GENTLEMEN,

Intelligence has reached me this afternoon in an apparently authentic form, of the death of GENERAL ANDREW JACKSON. He expired on Sunday, June 8th, at 6 o'clock, P. M., at his residence at the Hermitage. I have thought it proper to communicate officially this event, in order that you may take measures to enable the people of this city in sympathy with the whole people of the Union to manifest their sorrow for this national loss.

This is an extraordinary occasion. The greatest and best man in our country has fallen, and it is becoming that the event should be signalised by a mourning and grateful people. A Soldier of heroic genius, his achievements covered his country with imperishable renown; a Statesman of intuitive wisdom and profound sagacity, his perfect sympathy with the popular masses, made him their truest representative and chosen leader in the great political movements of the time. More than any other man he has given the impress of his own character to our age and the institutions of our country, and the memory of his virtues will be embalmed in the hearts of his countrymen to the latest posterity.

With great respect, Gentlemen,
Yours, &c.

W. F. HAVEMEYER.

Whereupon, Alderman Briggs rose, and after making some suitable remarks on the melancholy subject, presented the following preamble and resolutions, and moved their adoption, viz :

Whereas, the Common Council having just received the afflicting intelligence of the death of ANDREW JACKSON, late President of the United States, one who has filled a space in the history of his country, second only to the immortal WASHINGTON; one who, in early life, served in the war of our revolution, and in middle age, defended the rights secured by that revolution, and thus rendered a service for which the wreath he won as a victorious chief, was no compensation, and afterwards, when called to the first station in the gift of a free people, devoted the energy of a great and heroic mind to that people. Deeply sympathising with his immediate friends and the whole American people in their bereavement, therefore

Resolved, That a Joint Committee of five from each Board be appointed, in conjunction with the Presidents of both Boards, to confer with our fellow-citizens as to the best mode to be adopted to testify our respect for the distinguished worth and positions held by the deceased.

Resolved, That the Mayor be requested to unite with the Committee for the above purpose.

Resolved, That the Committee report such arrangements as they determine upon, to a special meeting of the Common Council, to be called for that purpose.

Alderman Benson then rose, and in seconding the adoption of the preamble and resolutions, in a very feeling manner paid a high tribute to the character of the illustrious deceased.

Whereupon the same were unanimously adopted, and the Chair appointed Aldermen Briggs, Benson, Meserole, Tappan and Hart such Committee on the part of this Board, and the same was directed to be sent to the Board of Assistants for concurrence.

The following Message of his Honor the Mayor, in relation to the death of General Andrew Jackson, and the preamble and resolutions, were received from the Board of Aldermen :

MAYOR'S OFFICE, June 16, 1845.

*To the Honorable
the Common Council :*

GENTLEMEN,

Intelligence has reached me this afternoon in an apparently authentic form, of the death of GENERAL ANDREW JACKSON. He expired on Sunday, June 8th, at 6 o'clock, P. M., at his residence at the Hermitage. I have thought it proper to communicate officially to you this event, in order that you may take measures to enable the people of this city in sympathy with the whole people of this Union to manifest their sorrow for this national loss.

This is an extraordinary occasion. The greatest and best man in our country has fallen, and it is becoming that the event should be signalized by a mourning and grateful people. A Soldier of heroic genius, his achievements covered his country with imperishable renown; a Statesman of intuitive wisdom and profound sagacity, his perfect sympathy with the popular masses, made him their truest representative and chosen leader in the great political movements of the time. More than any other man he has given the impress of his own character to our age, and the institutions of our country, and the memory of his virtues will be embalmed in the hearts of his countrymen to the latest posterity.

With great respect, Gentlemen,
Yours, &c.

W. F. HAVEMEYER.

PREAMBLE AND RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, this Common Council having just received the afflicting intelligence of the death of ANDREW JACKSON, late President of the United States, one who has filled a space in the history of his country, second only to the immortal WASHINGTON; one who, in early life, served in the war of "our revolution"—and in middle age, defended the rights secured by that revolution, and thus rendered a service for which the wreath he won as a victorious Chief, was no compensation, and afterwards, when called to the first station in the gift of a free people, devoted the energy of a great and heroic mind to that people. Deeply sympathising with his immediate friends and the whole American people in their bereavement, therefore

Resolved, That a Joint Committee of five from each Board be appointed, in conjunction with the President of each Board, to confer with our fellow-citizens as to the best mode to be adopted to testify our respect for the distinguished worth and positions held by the deceased.

Resolved, That the Mayor be requested to unite with the Committee for the above purpose.

Resolved, That the Committee report such arrangements as they determine upon, to a special meeting of the Common Council, to be called for that purpose.

The Committee on the part of the Board of Aldermen consists of Messrs. Briggs, Benson, Meserole, Tappan, and Hart.

Concurred in—and Messrs. Cornell, Ogden, Purser, Nichols, and Candee, appointed such Committee on the part of this Board.

Mr. Purser offered the following preamble and resolutions, which were adopted unanimously :

Whereas, the venerable ANDREW JACKSON departed this life, on the evening of the 8th of June, in full possession of his mental powers—and calmly relying on the mercy of his God. Independent, sagacious, and undaunted in the Cabinet, and the field—wise in conception and vigorous in action—the life of Andrew Jackson is identified with American History, and must be honored and beloved while the institutions exist which in Peace and in War he faithfully laboured to defend. Therefore

Resolved, That we deeply deplore the death of Andrew Jackson, whose public services and private worth, have endeared him to the hearts of his countrymen.

Resolved, That we tender to his sorrowing relatives our deep commiseration, while we feel that in the death of Andrew Jackson a public calamity has occurred, in lamenting which, there should be no distinction of party.
